

Attractions

In 1819, the City of Lawrenceburg became the county seat for Lawrence County, Tennessee. Frontiersman David Crockett called Lawrence County home and has left an indelible mark on our community. The immigration of an Amish community north of town in 1944 has added another dimension to our culture.

Lawrenceburg is the birthplace of Southern Gospel music and was the hometown of James Vaughan, the father of Southern Gospel! The famous Vaughan School of Music was established in Lawrenceburg, and the Vaughan Museum is a popular attraction on the Square.

Other famous residents of Lawrenceburg include former United States Senator Fred Thompson, now an actor appearing on the hit TV show Law and Order. Many will remember his performance in the movie Hunt for Red October. The late Michael Jeter, best known for his TV role in Evening Shade and his movie role in The Green Mile, also had roots in Lawrenceburg.

Our Downtown Square is an old-fashioned town square, complete with a statue of David

Crockett - perfect backdrop for a photo! Come see the historic sites, stroll the antique malls and a wide variety of other stores, then stay for coffee, ice cream, or lunch.

There is a central pavilion when you're ready for a rest, or 'sit a spell' in the benches along the sidewalks and watch the world go by. Friendly folks may stop by to say hello. Public restrooms are available. There are several banks and an ATM located on the Square.

Shopping

The Lawrenceburg Square is "antique heaven," with antique malls/stores galore. The selection is outstanding and the prices are reasonable.

Upscale clothing and children's store owners will give you personal attention. Stores along the Square are great places to shop for gifts. There is also a Christian bookstore and several music stores. The selection is unlike you'll find anywhere else, and the pace is leisurely.

The City of Lawrenceburg is a destination community for shopping of all types - from department store to discount store, plus full-service grocers, drug stores, and more.
